

TERMS & CONDITIONS FUTURE FOOD DESIGN AWARDS 2018

- By entering the Future Food Design Award competition, you will automatically become a member of the Dutch Institute of Food&Design (free of charge).
- You must be demonstrably involved in food issues as a designer, producer, professional, student or in some other capacity.
- You may apply on behalf of an organisation, a collective, etc., as long as there is one single point of contact who will manage all communication from the start (vlog, presentation, etc.).
- Incomplete entries will not be considered.
- Entries submitted after the deadline will not be considered.
- Please note that, with your entry, you accept that we might use your material in our communication. The top twelve designs will be featured on the DIFD website.
- The project must be completed, or if it is still ongoing, you must have progressed beyond the conceptualisation stage and have, for example, a prototype or a serious plan.
- Your project should not have been started before 1st January 2014 i.e. it should be a contemporary project.
- Preferably, you will be able to attend the FFDA award show during Dutch Design Week 2018 in the city of Eindhoven, The Netherlands (date t.b.a.). Travel costs will be at your own expense. It's also possible to attend via Skype. For Skype attendance, a decent internet connection is required.
- Your video must be in English or have English subtitles, so a good understanding of the English language is required.
- You must be prepared and willing to mobilise your own network to promote your entry for the audience award.
- The monetary prize may only be used to further develop the winning design or to fund a relevant follow-up project.
